Santa Claus and Jack Frost.
Just as it commenced raining the other day, Santa Claus met his old friend Jack Frost, looking rather gloomy, when the following conversation took place:

"What's the news, Jack? You look down in the mouth; what's the matter?"

"Jack—Um mad."

"Santa, I'm worried about it. You know, I've done so many wonderful things in my day, that I thought I could do anything, so I laid a wager with an old chum of mine that I could break up CONOVER & WALKER's splendid organization to-morrow. I got the boys to do it, and kept up the attack vigorously for three or four days, until I completely beat out. I thought that the crowd that besieged the 'Central Park' was on my side. I would soon make a killing, and was very carefully expecting to have a result, but much to my disappointment, every one who went in, no matter who he was, old or young, rich or poor, came out with a pair of Skates under his arm, and looking pleased besides. I made up my mind that there is no use trying it any longer, and I intend to leave town this afternoon."

Santa (laughing) said: "I'll help you if you had only consulted me. I would have told you to go on, to make that a good wager. You might just as well try to eat an iceberg. You must know, old fellow, that's the tool I got my Christmas supplies, not only of SKATES, but of ICE CHESTS, POCKET-KNIVES, &c. I never knew a man who could stand such a strain, and though the outfit is nice enough, I never knew them to give out in varieties or quantities."

Good-Bye, Jack! I'll know better than to try such a thing again.

Santa—Good-bye, Jack (calling after him). Jack, won't you come and spend Christmas with us? The children will all be delighted to see you."

Jack—Well, I'll try."

If any one wants to see what an impossible job poor Jack undertakes, let him step in at the "CENTRAL PARK SKATE" EMPORIUM CONOVER & WALKER, Hardware Dealers, No. 47 Broadway, between Grand and Broome-sts.
